

Alpharetta-GA Party

About Alpharetta

Sitting just north of downtown Atlanta, Alpharetta is Georgia's 12th most populous city and is known to have some of the best and highest-ranked schools in the state. Education, history, and modern tech make the city a popular spot for any entrepreneur looking for a place to start any sort of tech business. Also referred to as the technology city of the south, Alpharetta is home to a large number of tech-focused companies which helps drive the local economy and opens up an array of job opportunities. Progressing towards the future of tech while keeping in touch with its historical and natural beauty, the city offers a unique mix of locations and venues that are capable of hosting events and parties of all sizes.

The areas surrounding Alpharetta include lakes, creeks, open parks, and recreational areas, as well as more than enough hiking, biking, and camping to give any outdoor enthusiast their fill of sunshine and adventure. Scenic locations such as Big Creek and Jones Bridge park give visitors iconic beauty as well as locations to fish, hike, bike, and picnic with the family. With a change of pace from the green trees and calm waters, the Computer Museum of America gives visitors the chance to explore the past by using hands-on exhibits and displays that show the progress of technology and computer sciences. The local parks, large recreational areas, and one-of-a-kind historical locations make it easy to keep guests entertained and enjoying their visit while exploring the tech city of the south.
